I want to start telling a true story about shared room living situations and why more people need to avoid them. There are noisy people that rent rooms in shared room living situations like they do not have a life on their own. I am currently moving to West Michigan with the first lady Jennifer this Memorial Day weekend to get out of the current shared room living situation because other tenants living at the property are lazy. The landlord already texted me like a reminder email to move out at the end of this month. People in shared room living situations are putting themselves in situations that do not make sense. I never like being treated as a charity case in the living situation because my mother raised my sister and I to depend on ourselves and be more independent. I am moving to West Michigan to care for my own children and wife Jennifer. My aunt told me a long time ago that I need to be living with her and we are legally supposed to be separated from each other. That is why I say I am going to stop moving around so much. I love my wife Jennifer and our three young children. People in shared room situations are following the path of Lucifer and worry about other people on what others are doing in their life making themselves more depressed in the long run. People in shared room living situations act like haters, envious, mental health and anger issues. People in shared room living situations are disrespectful to others and do not recommend those living situations with no one. The best shared room living situation was in Georgia because properties interior and exteriors were better with better amenities. The twins Nehemiah and Nashaun are in fourth grade in Chicago Public schools right now and transferring to school in West Michigan this fall. Noah is the youngest in Chicago Public school in second grade. According to the text message, the landlord said that I can just leave and move on by moving to West Michigan.

We do not need to be around and get caught with talk and gossip around us. We need to try to keep drama from around us including relationships. That is why in my previous sermons about choosing our twelve disciples that are humble to God with peace and only live by God's grace.

1. The command to mind our own business.
2. The danger of meddling
3. Speaking life vs. Spreading noise
4. The pursuit of peace and healthy boundaries
5. Practical steps to mindful engagement

What is one specific steps you can take this week to mind your own business?
Think of a situation where you could set healthy boundaries.
Commit to a no gossip challenge for day or week
Pray for grace to live a quiet life.
